Invitation to a World-conversation for our Medical Movement:

What has been our soul experience in the last years?

29 June 2024, Online discussion, in English

Dear colleagues, dear friends:

We would again like to invite you a pair of online discussions (one intended more for Asia, one more for the Americas, but with open invitation for both):

29 June 2024; 0700 CET and 2000 CET (3pm Melbourne time and 30/06/2024 4am Melbourne time). Each meeting will conclude after about 90 minutes.

We look forward to a fruitful conversation in real time. Recordings will not be available.

Our Topic:

This member conversation turns towards our soul orientation. The evening will begin with a brief update on processes like the WHO pandemic agreement and International Health Regulations, but our focus will be on how we can inwardly meet the change and uncertainty of outer events.

Also, how can we understand and digest the last several years as a threshold experience?

We will consider what Anthroposophy gives us for renewed orientation, strength and support for the future.

Here is the zoom link for the meetings (which will be the same for both):

In April of 2025 Taikura Rudolf Steiner School will once again host an International Kolisko Conference. The theme is Great Expectations: Meeting the Challenge of Expectations for Self, each Other and of Life.

The conference is led by three keynote speakers Dr Adam Blanning, along with Chris Burke and Anne de Wild directors of The Hummingbird Principle.

Adam Blanning is an anthroposophic physician and school doctor in Colorado with a special interest in child development. He is president of the Anthroposophic Health Association and directs the medical training programmes for anthroposophic medicine in the USA and Canada. Adam is the author of Understanding Deeper Developmental Needs: Holistic Approaches for Challenging Behaviours in Children along with Raising Sound Sleepers: Helping Children Use their Senses to Rest and Self Soothe. Adam is a co-leader of the Medical Section for Anthroposophic Medicine at the Goetheanum in Dornach.

Anne de Wild is a naturopath and biography counsellor in private practice in Basel, Switzerland. One of her main focuses is to support parents towards a deeper understanding of their child's temperament. Her training in biography work is crucial to working with clients, creating a personal connection between the issue at hand and the individual's life story. In addition, she offers lectures and workshops on various topics, including the five temperaments and the phases of life.

Chris Burke is an associate professor of psychology at Lehigh University in Pennsylvania, where his research has focused on social relationships and coping with stress. He teaches on topics ranging from grief and anxiety to how to live a meaningful life, always bringing biographical questions and assignments to help students connect the content to their own experiences.

More details along with ways to register will follow later in the year.

Can you help?

Recently Dr Carsten Gründemann professor of Translational Medicine at the University of Basel was in New Zealand looking for a Masters or PhD candidate in medicine, pharmacy, biology, life science etc, who is interested in research on NZ indigenous medicinal plants. If you have heard of anyone within the greater community interested or already actively involved in research at this level who might be excited to do part of their research at his well equipped laboratory at the University, under his supervision, please have them contact me for more details. Carsten has been involved in published research on many of the plants used in anthroposophic medicine and is eager to share and support study into traditional medicinal plants.
